

```
1 export const handler = async () => {
2     const table = process.env.RESULTS_TABLE_NAME;           // load results table name from env
3     const url = process.env.IMAGE_PROCESSING_URL;           // load request URL form env
4     const timestamp = new Date();                           // store the timestamp
5
6     try {
7         const response = await fetch(url);                  // send request for image processing
8         const item = { timestamp, ...response };             // prepare result to save
9         await database.put(table, item);                     // persist the result
10        return 200;                                           // return successfully
11    } catch (error) {
12        // ...                                                // handle error
13        return 500;                                           // return unsuccessfully
14    }
15 }
16 }
```